"WESTERN CATTLE IN STORM" The $1.00 value used on large corner card cover. Registered mail from New York to Bavaria in July, 1908.

The City of Omaha, Nebraska, was a worldwide focal point in 1898, when the community staged the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition. The set of nine stamps issued to commemorate the event are among the legends of United States philately.

In 1897, Edward Rosewater, editor of The Daily Bee newspaper in Omaha, asked the Postmaster General to issue stamps for the exposition. Consenting to the proposal, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing designed the stamps to appear in two colors. The idea was abandoned when the Spanish-American War caused the Bureau to spend much of its time producing revenue paper to support the conflict. Nevertheless, with a stamp in the set considered to be the most beautiful ever produced by the U.S.--the $1.00 "Western Cattle In Storm" issue--the Trans-Mississippi Issue became an enchanting set for philatelists. Its importance in commemorating America's successful western expansion cannot be underestimated.

Pages shown here--from the most extensive collection ever formed of this issue--offer important off-cover examples of the stamps (including major one-of-a-kind items) and significant domestic and foreign destination usages. Particular attention is called to the large multiples of the higher values.
